Laura Susanne Pike will have another two months to decide who will represent her at a trial currently scheduled for May 5, 2015.

Pike, 39 of Lawrenceburg, and her boyfriend Brett Smith, 36 of Fisherville, were both arrested in January of this year for incidents that allegedly happened while the couple lived in Eminence involving sexual acts with an 11-year-old girl and relative of Pike, according to the criminal complaint. Pike faces two counts of incest, two counts of sodomy and one count of sexual abuse, while Smith's charges include one count of sodomy and three counts of sexual abuse.

Renaissance fair makes local impact

news@hclocal.com

The Kentucky Highlands Renaissance Festival is back in Henry County, as it has been for the last nine years. But this isn't a case where some out-of-towners swoop in, hang around for six weeks and leave town with local money — the owners have lived here in Eminence for the last two years.

Ed Frederick, general manager and owner of Kentucky Renaissance Fair, LLC, is a true Kentuckian.

Born and raised in Lexington, Frederick had been a horse breeder. Now, he's fully committed to making the Kentucky Renaissance Fair a sustainable business.

Frederick discovered his love of renaissance fairs while living in Texas. Just looking for something to do

Col. William Pollard landed on D-Day to help free Europe

news@hclocal.com

This June marks the 70th anniversary of D-Day — the day British and American forces landed on the beaches of Normandy, France in an effort to retake the area from Nazi forces.

One Henry County soldier who would rise through the ranks to colonel landed and fought on those beaches so the Allies could make a big push to liberate Europe from the Nazis.

In the bloody battle, more than 1,400 American soldiers lost their lives, but the waves of soldiers eventually broke through the German lines.

It remains one of the most ambitious attacks in American history and it gave the Allied Forces the positioning they needed to drive into Europe and beat the Germans back.

Colonel William F. Pollard, as a member of the 481st Artillery Division, landed with the other troops that day at Omaha Beach, one of five sectors along the Normandy coast.

Pollard hails from Lockport and currently resides in Pleasureville.

He spent 23 years in the military, fighting in World War II and Korea before entering civil service with Texas Instruments during the Vietnam War.

In addition to D-Day, he saw action at The Battle of the Bulge and served under Generals Omar Bradley and George Patton.

Pollard, like so many others, lost friends and comrades during the war. He saw the horrors of war and marched through the muck to help secure the freedom of not only the United States, but people around the world.

Now 96, Pollard sat at a kitchen table strewn with albums, letters, medals and papers. Each artifact told a story and, as he turned them over in his hands and carefully unfolded each slip of fragile paper, those stories came to life.

If only for a moment, the men in those pictures lived again, the ships sailed and the wind tossed the sands of Omaha Beach on June 6, 1944.

"That's me before the war," Pollard said, pointing to a picture of a much younger version of himself.

Stocky, well-built and carefree, he leaned back with his hands in his pockets and a sly smile on his lips.

The photo from a year later paints a different picture. Much thinner and stiffer, the man in this photo had seen

Patriot Guard Riders journey to Eminence to mend veteran's heart

BY CHRIS BROOKE

The person who slashed a disabled veteran's flag on South Main Street in Eminence June 7 also inflicted pain on the man who had the banner proudly displayed, but a contingent of Kentucky Patriot Guard Riders have showed up to repair the damage.

Every morning, Charles Turner Sr. salutes the Stars and Strips outside his home to show reverence for the United States and for those who fought and died for their country.

But when he went outside June 7, Turner made a shocking discovery. He told the world about it on a video posted to his Facebook page.

"I don't know what to say. I haven't offended anybody that I know of. I don't have any enemies," said a visibly shaken Turner. "I'm outside cutting my grass and what do I find? That last night somebody cut my flag to pieces — that cuts my heart!"

While the government has been making decisions not everybody agrees with, Turner wondered why an unknown person or persons would take it out by ripping up someone's U.S. flag.

He also wondered why the vandals could be so callous or why they would want to target him.

No matter how it came about, he sees the damage

Bedford man charged with June Campbellsburg gas station robbery

Kentucky State Police report troopers arrested a Trimble County man for a June 10 robbery at the Marathon station in Campbellsburg. KSP Post 5 dispatchers received an emergency call at 10:49 p.m. that someone had just robbed the store and then fled on foot, according to a news release by Trooper Brad Arterburn. The worker told troopers that the subject demanded money but did not brandish a weapon. Authorities set up a perimeter in the area, but did not find the subject.

Security footage led to a man identified as Clint Hayes, 35, of Bedford being sought as a suspect. Troopers made contact with Hayes's wife, Camie Bramlette at their Webb Lane residence. "Bramlette, who is an employee at the Marathon, admitted to planning the robbery with her husband but advised she had changed her mind and asked him not to rob the store," according to the news release. Troopers later found Hayes at his home. "As troopers approached the residence on foot, Hayes attempted to flee in a minivan," according to the KSP. "After nearly striking two troopers, Hayes was arrested." On June 11, authorities charged Hayes with robbery in the second degree and two counts of wanton endangerment of a police officer. Hayes was taken to the Carroll County Detention Center after his arrest. Trooper Barrett Brewer is handling the investigation.

year of the war. There was no smile, no hands in his pockets — just straight posture and a baggy uniform. Pollard doesn't deny how difficult the war was. "I don't discuss it," he said. "Not with my wife or my son. My sons probably learned more in the last year than ever before." He went on to say that there's no need to talk about the things that happened during the war, even saying that fellow soldiers didn't discuss it. "You didn't ask [another soldier] what he'd done." The military is often referred to as a brotherhood. People who serve are a part of that community forever and there's a certain level of respect that comes with having served. Pollard said that his service shaped him as a person. "You trust [your fellow soldiers]," he said. "Those boys, the soldiers we had in those days would do anything in the world for the military. I saw them give their lives for it." In all likelihood, Pollard's life would've turned out very differently, had it not been for the war. Before being drafted, he had plans to go to college and work. Living in Detroit and working for A&P Company at the time, Pollard decided to go with his brother to look at the local draft board and see if they'd been selected. His brother was told that he probably had over a year before he had to worry about being drafted. But when Pollard handed over his draft card, he received a very different message. "She took my card and came back and said, 'I hope you brought your toothbrush,'" he recalled. "So they got me that quick. A year before my brother." Putting his life on hold, Pollard entered the military expecting to be back in a year. He retired 23 years later. And now the upcoming celebration of our Independence Day is an interesting time for people like Pollard. Many soldiers fought and died to protect the freedoms of people who will never know their names. But veterans like Pollard say they were just doing their job. "You think about how you saved the United States," he said. "You have to. But you don't dwell on it." WORLD WAR II VETERANS ALSO HONORED AT NEW CASTLE PATRIOTIC FESTIVAL INCLUDE:

Fred Balke, 91, Crestwood

Served in Pacific Theatre in Solomon Islands, which included Bougainville, Guadalcanal and Okinawa, building airfields and harbors allowing supplies to be brought in to support the troupes.

Alfred Williams, 89, New Castle

Enlisted in the Navy in 1941 as an aircraft mechanic. Stationed on Aircraft Carrier Saratoga and Cruiser St. Louis. Was at Guadalcanal during invasion. Was a gunner on dive bombers and torpedo bombers. Was transferred back to States in 1944.

Woodrow Peyton, 92, Campbellsburg

Landed on Utah Beach on D-Day plus 11 as a gunner on a tank crew in 607th Tank Destroyer Battalion. Earned Bronze Star by destroying three German Panzer tanks singlehandedly. Was in Battle of Metz as well as other campaigns.

Dee L 'Pete' Raymer, 92, Smithfield

Enlisted Dec. 1942 in Army and eventually became a Corporal. Served in Miami Beach on Coastal Artillery, transferred to Virginia Beach. Shipped to Philippines in July 1945. At one point there were five Raymer brothers in the service at the same time during WWII while six of nine brothers were in the service during war. Pete was discharged in 1946.

on a Saturday in the Lone Star State, he came to this kind of historically-themed recreation by a happy chance.

“I walked through the gate and I was like, ‘This is the neatest thing I’ve ever been to in my life,’” he recalled. “And I was hooked from then on.”

Frederick got involved in the lifestyle of renaissance faires and gained exposure to the business and how it works.

What makes the Renaissance Festival a unique kind of entertainment, he said, is it offers facts and fun in a way no textbook history lesson could.

When he and his family moved back to Kentucky to be closer to relatives, Frederick discovered that no similar entertainment existed in the whole state. So they decided to create a renaissance faire themselves.

Nine years later, it seems they made the right decision. Frederick said he has seen days where only 200 people have come through, but now he’s getting closer to 1,200, even on rainy days.

The fair provides good, affordable family entertainment on the weekend, Frederick said. The entry fee is $15 per adult, $8 per child ages 6-12 and free for children five and under and parking is included.

All shows inside are available at no extra charge. Other costs could arise from playing games, getting on the rides or buying food and souvenirs.

The faire is good for the community because attendees also spend money locally, Frederick said. But despite the success, Frederick said that Henry County has been slow to respond to their presence.

Most of their traffic still comes from out of town and out of state, though the last two years have shown better response from the locals.

Frederick credits the new growth to the fact that their family now lives in Eminence.

He stressed that they want to be members of the community here in Henry County. His daughter is a member of the Henry County Chamber of Commerce and her children attend Eminence Independent Schools.

Kentucky Renaissance Fair also offers other festivals on their grounds, such as the Celtic Fest, Froggy Field Party, Dickens Christmas, a corn maze and a pumpkin patch.

All activities come with a focus on authenticity and immersion, and they serve historically accurate food and drink from that time period.

“If I wasn’t running this place, I would feel that this area is very fortunate to have this venue,” Frederick said. “If I just lived here and did something different, I would really enjoy that I had something like this in my backyard.”

The Highlands Renaissance Festival is running every weekend through July 6.

A full list of events can be found on their website at kyrenfaire.com.

Relay support appreciated in cancer fight

Being thankful is not always an easy thing to do.

I was diagnosed with stage 3 colon cancer on Nov. 27, 2013 — the day before Thanksgiving — a day set aside to be thankful.

For anyone that has ever received such a diagnosis, thankfulness is not the first thought in your mind.

Nor was it mine, but after coming out on the other side of this experience it gave me a chance to reflect and be thankful. Sometimes when you go through adverse times in your life it gives you an opportunity to stop and really recognize what you have to be thankful for.

I am thankful to have a husband that meant

PHYLLIS banta

every word when he said “we are in this fight together” after my diagnosis. Every doctor appointment, 12 days in the hospital and 30 days of radiation, he was there for them all and he is still here taking excellent care of me.

I am thankful for a wonderful daughter-in-law and for my two remarkable sons, they without even realizing it, give me a reason to fight this battle.

I am thankful for a special friend who unselfishly gave her time to be with me whenever I needed her and continues to be at my house at least twice every week to help with ongoing medical issues. She even shaved my hair when I came to that point in my treatments and is willing to shave her head in support of me and to raise money for Relay.

I am thankful to have a pastor and church family that continually prayed for me, and a Sunday School class that never missed a week in sending me an encouraging card, text or phone call.

I am thankful for a very special boss and co-workers that jumped in without hesitation to cover my work load for an extended amount of time and not once complained about it.

I am thankful for a brother and my sisters-in-law that were always there cooking, cleaning and running errands for me.

I am thankful for a niece that always knew exactly when I needed a visit from my great niece and nephew to cheer me up when I was feeling down.

I am thankful for neighbors that are like family to me. Always offering anything they could to help out in any way.

I am thankful that I live in a community where Relay for Life is supported by so many people. Henry County began participating in Relay in 1995. The first year the county raised $9,000. This year’s goal is $85,000.

Over the past 18 years, Henry County Relay for Life has raised over one million dollars in the fight against cancer, helping the American Cancer Society fund valuable research and outreach programs.

I am thankful for the research that has been done in recent years to provide me with treatments for the particular form of cancer I had.

Only 10 years ago when diagnosed with this type of cancer a person would receive the news and undergo surgery to have a colostomy. Thankfully, now there are other options and this is made possible from money raised from events like Relay for Life.

So regardless of the reason you attend Relay or donate money, just remember that it really does touch lives. The money donated or the time you spend helping out with fundraisers does make a difference in someone’s life. It did in mine.

So come out this Friday night to Henry County High School for Relay for Life at 7 p.m. and support the continued efforts to fight this battle.

You will be thankful you did.

Want to try a copy of the Local? It’s on us!

If you’re reading this, you’re holding in your hands what we call the sample edition of the Henry County Local.

As careful consumers, readers will no doubt want to take this product for a spin and kick the proverbial tires before making a commitment.

If there’s one thing I’ve noticed about people in my introduction to Henry County, it’s that citizens have a deep and wide knowledge of their community here.

CHRIS brooke
Editor

That applies not only to current events, but to the people, the businesses and the history.

That kind of understanding usually arises from a personal history, a sense of involvement and a sense of caring about what happens from day to day.

And like a vehicle, that knowledge can only be sustained through regular maintenance.

Peruse these pages.

Hopefully, you will find them helpful in keeping your knowledge base current, kind of like how a 3,000-mile oil change will keep your car purring along.

As I’ve said to anybody who will listen, a newspaper will thrive or shrivel on the basis of its involvement in the community.

Everybody has knowledge to share. Everybody has a story to tell. Everybody has an interest outside themselves.

Everybody has different attitudes about the way the decisions of others will impact them, whether it be a governmental mandate or whether their neighbor decides what to do with their trash.

It’s the goal of the Local to provide the information to help readers navigate the roadmap of community life.

Getting this edition into your home can help with that.

Just like you wouldn’t want to drive your car until the oil gets all burned up and the engine block cracks, you wouldn’t want to hold forth on an issue without getting an informational update.

Buying the Local each week probably isn’t the biggest commitment you’ll make this week.

It takes work to keep your vehicle on the road and functioning. Why would you stop short on maintaining your knowledge of the Henry County community?

When the rubber hits the road, make sure you remain in the driver’s seat.

Grimes’ comments on coal stance murky

A few weeks ago, a commercial began running with a mother thanking Alison Lundergan Grimes for a bill she pushed through the state house to help our military personnel vote.

Sounds good right?

Problem is, the bill Alison is touting as a crowning achievement of her work as Secretary of State, the Military Heroes Voting Initiative, is not what she had originally sought.

State Senator Damon Thayer, the Majority Floor Leader recently

JON park
Chairman, Henry County GOP

said, “We had to do major surgery to that bill.”

In other words the bill she is taking credit for, isn’t hers.

On the heels of the President’s War on Coal EPA Standards came out, Alison Lundergan Grimes put out a new ad stating that she will stand up to President Obama, and Sen. Harry Reid, as an independent voice.

When word got out that Sen. Reid was hosting a Fundraising Breakfast for Grimes, she promised that she would bring up the coal issue at the event, but when recordings of the event surfaced last week and the word coal was never mentioned, she said she spoke to Reid before...

uh after the event, but then additional video of the event came out of Reid coming to the Washington D.C. Hotel alone, late, and leaving alone early.

No private conversation as she claimed.

In his remarks at the Grimes Washington Fundraising event, the Senate Majority Leader said, “I am not only depending on you, and my 54 Democratic senators are depending on you...I say that as unequivocally as I can”.

In other words,

Sen. Reid is counting on Grimes to maintain the status quo in Washington, to keep Harry “coal makes us sick” Reid, the majority leader.

And what did Alison say during the event that caused her to “forget” to bring up coal? Her new Senate office.

While Alison Lundergan Grimes says she is an independent voice, events and actions say otherwise, President Obama’s Kentucky candidate to take out the thorn in his side, Sen. Mitch McConnell, and

Sen. Harry Reid’s comments prove that they are counting on Grimes to be a rubber stamp.

Kentucky is fortunate to have Sen. Mitch McConnell standing in the way of President Barack Obama.

Alison will say she’s for Kentucky, then step aside and let Obama, Reid and Pelosi run rampant over the Bluegrass.

It’s a bit premature to be measuring the windows for new drapes Alison.

done to the Star-Spangled Banner as despicable and hurtful. “In the Army, we’re taught that the flag is a symbol of a living country and is considered a living thing,” he said on the video. “Somebody killed my flag.” Originally from Louisville, Turner moved with his wife Marchetia to Eminence 20 years ago when they blended their families together. Turner understands the sacrifices made by those who serve their country, because he’s gone overseas, he’s been away from his family during his time in the military.

He joined the Army in 1979 and served at a Nike/Hercules missile base in Germany, got shot in the leg while helping to keep the demilitarized zone in Korea secure and received a serious head wound when faulty pyrotechnic devices accidentally went off in his hand during training exercises at Fort Knox. He joined the service after other careers didn’t work out.

“I was a kid, I was really not finding anything I could stick with, so I thought the best thing to do was to join the military, serve my country and that was my way of contributing.” Turner’s Army career ended earlier than he wanted it to. He wore out both knees and had knee replacement surgery on both.

He also suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder from the accidental explosion during the training exercises.

On that day, Turner had been setting up booby traps to catch the other companies competing in the training off guard when the accident happened. Not unlike the fire-works used in Thunder Over Louisville, the pyrotechnics were supposed to light up the training area when they went off. Instead, they went off in his hand and sliced open his forehead. In the years following, Turner would wake up screaming from nightly dreams of the explosion. He’s thankful that his wife has been there to help him through it all this time, though the dreams have not gone away. Comforting words from her would bring him out of the nightmares and back to the present day. “She keeps me sane — there’s a lot of veterans who don’t have anybody,” he said. “Those are the ones you see who are homeless and don’t have any direction.”

After posting the video to social media, Turner felt overwhelmed by the response. Shared hundreds of times, it also brought this incident to the attention of the Patriot Guard Riders, a non-profit group who ride out to show respect for fallen heroes and to shield mourning families in their time of grief from protestors.

Tony Long, Janice Martin and Michael and Janice Collins rode their motorcycles from Winchester to Eminence to show their support for Turner after seeing the video.

“It tugged at our heart strings,” Martin explained.

Long placed the new flag in its stanchion on the front porch as the Patriot Guard Riders and Turner gathered around.

It’s important to honor those who sacrificed, and the group does so in a variety of ways, the Patriot Guard Riders believe.

“It’s also important to take care of our living veterans as well as those who have passed on,” Long said.

The Patriot Guard Riders is a diverse group of bike riders from across the nation, according to the group’s website at www.patriot-guard.org.

“We have one thing in common besides motorcycles,” the group’s mission statement says. “We have an unwavering respect for those who risk their very lives for America’s freedom and security including Fallen Military Heroes, First Responders and Honorably Discharged Veterans. If you share this respect, please join us.”

“All you have to do is have a heart and show up,” Long said.

Turner felt grateful to the riders who drove their Harley, Kawasaki and Yamaha motorcycles more than 115 miles one way to provide him with some comfort after the vandalism. “I’m no hero,” Turner said. “There’s a lot of heroes out there — I’m just a guy who did what he was supposed to do and got injured along the way.”

“It’s really not about me, it’s about the country and someone has disgraced the flag,” Turner said. “The Patriot Guard Riders are going to retire my flag honorably.”

All flags that Long gives out are made in the USA, he stressed.

“If anything happens to this one, we’ll get you another — we’ve got plenty of flags,” Long told Turner as he replaced the vandalized one.

CHRIS BROOKE/LOCAL

After 25 years, Linda Moore is still going strong as the driver of the Henry County Library Bookmobile with its selection of around 600 books for all ages. On June 4, she stopped the bookmobile at Joy's Learning Center in Eminence to share something to read with the 52 boys and girls in Joy's Summer Camp. Rae Lynne Morgan of Joy's Learning Center said the bookmobile is an invaluable service to the children of Henry County by helping to promote literacy through the summer reading program. The children at Joy's Learning Center will check out a book each week to keep in their cubbies and read throughout the week. This also helps the whole family, she said, because they might not have a lot of time to make a special trip to the library.

Pike and Smith will be tried together as co-defendants. Smith has retained an attorney to prepare his defense, but Pike has yet to decide whether to rely on a public defender or hire a private attorney. "Ms. Pike said she would be hiring private counsel," said public defender Jessica Schulte. "Ms. Pike has been in jail for almost five months and has not retained private counsel and said she cannot decide. So at this point, the court needs to make a decision." Pike claimed that her family told her they would hire an attorney for her, but that hasn't happened yet. If she decides to release her public defender and her family does not find an attorney for her, Pike faces a jury trial in which she would be forced to act as her own attorney. "I'm trying to be faithful and trust my family, but I also don't want to not have any representation," Pike told Judge Karen Conrad during circuit court Thursday. Conrad warned Pike that if Schulte was released as her attorney that she would not reassign another public defender to represent her. "What I'm telling you is that if your family doesn't come up with the money to hire an attorney, and this case will be very expensive - these are serious charges - then you might be in position to represent yourself in trial," Conrad told Pike. "You had a chance to have counsel, and these attorneys work very hard and I'm concerned about their workload and I won't add to it." Conrad continued that although she could not tell Pike what to do, she felt comfortable recommending Schulte as a quality attorney who "fights very hard for her clients." "I am confidently telling you you're in good hands. She's excellent. I've seen her pick a jury. The court is telling you she is a very competent attorney," Conrad said. "I'm trying to be objective about this, because I don't know you or your family or your circumstances, but if I knew you I'd say she needs to stay with a public defender because you at least would have an attorney." Pike contended that she and Schulte "got off on the wrong foot" and because of the seriousness of the charges, she felt she needed an attorney who specializes in the kind of defense she needed to prepare. "No offense to Ms. Schulte, but this is my life," Pike said. Judge Conrad agreed with her. "You are facing the possibility of life in prison," Conrad said. "She (Schulte) doesn't want to see you defend yourself." On her client's behalf, Schulte asked Conrad to agree to release Pike from custody. Pike's co-defendant Smith was released from custody Feb. 11 of this year after he posted a property bond. "She (Pike) has been incarcerated now for almost five months while her co-defender is out of custody," Schulte said. "There seems to be no physical evidence and these allegations are based completely on statements by children. I think it's appropriate that given the co-defendant is out of custody that she also be allowed to be out of custody. "Ms. Pike is indigent and has no property, but he's (Smith) out because he has money," Schulte argued. "She represents no more risk level than he does." Schulte added that Pike would agree to whatever conditions the court placed on her for her release. "Anything. I'll do anything," Pike told Conrad. Conrad countered that Smith was out of custody on the same amount of bond that Pike had been assessed, while Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Barry Moore argued that the bond had already been reduced once, that cases involving children often do not have physical evidence and that in light of the seriousness of the charges, the Commonwealth objected to any further reduction in Pike's bond. "I understand that she feels like this cannot be fair, but his family had the resources. Her family has not been able to come up with the resources and these are really serious charges given the age of the child involved," Conrad said. "I will not release you until your next pre-trial date. This will give you time to figure this out." Conrad denied Pike's request to modify her bond amount of $100,000 ($10,000 full cash) or $25,000 property bond. Her next court appearance will be August 14 at which time the court expects Pike to decide on the matter of counsel.

Grant's bond reduced in alleged pet torture case

BY MELISSA BLANKENSHIP

Henry County Circuit Court Judge Karen Conrad agreed to reduce the bond amount against Brandon Grant, who faces two charges of torturing a dog or cat with serious injury or death. Grant was arrested and jailed May 5 after he allegedly tortured and killed two dogs, Princess Bell and Gunner. His bond was set at $5,000.

Grant's attorney, Tim Crawford, asked for bond relief saying there was evidence that hadn't been reviewed, that his family supported him, that a job was waiting for him, that the allegations involve a "disgruntled" ex-girlfriend, and that Grant needed to have an opportunity for due process to prepare his defense. Crawford also suggested that his client was being held not on the basis of the charges, but for political reasons.

"This has become more of a political issue than a legal issue," Crawford said. "There are a number of people involved, like animal control, who seem to be turning this into a political case. We are just requesting due process.

Let him out. Let him go to work. And let him prepare his defense."

Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Josh Clubb argued against the bond reduction.

"Mr. Grant obviously has some issues. He has two assaults on his record and now two dogs were tortured and the death of those two dogs resulted in that," Clubb said. "The bond is not exorbitant. It is a sufficient amount."

Conrad refuted the claim that she was at all politically motivated in the case, but that she did have some concerns about Grant.

"I'm looking at his background. He's got issues, obviously with two assaults, two DUI's and failures to appear," Conrad said.

Conrad agreed to reduce Grant's bond to $1,000 with the condition that he live with his grandfather, have no contact with animals, have a full-time job and undergo drug testing. Grant will be back in court on July 10 at 9 a.m.

In other cases

• Judge Conrad agreed to reduce the bond in the case of Robert Eric Price, 45, who was incarcerated in November on three charges of sexual abuse involving a 14-year-old girl.

Price's defense attorney asked that his bond be reduced to $5,000 full cash and that he be placed on home incarceration, advising the court that Price plans to stay with his mother.

Of primary concern to Conrad was that Price agree to have absolutely no contact with the victim or the victim's family, an issue because Price has been and is currently in a relationship with a relative of the victim.

"Your honor, the victim's relative is in the middle here. She has been in a seven-year relationship with the defendant and has maintained contact with him while he has been incarcerated and even came to my office on his behalf," Price's attorney Glen Daves said. "Would the court allow contact between those two parties?"

Conrad was not inclined to do so.

"Due to the nature of the allegations, if he wants to be out of jail he has to abide by the rules and have no contact with the victim's [relation]," Conrad said. "Let me be perfectly clear here. You are to have no contact with the [relation]. If she calls you, you cannot talk to her. You cannot have contact with her. She can't come over. If she comes over, you're the one going to jail."

"It needs to be clear," Conrad continued. "She is in contact with her [relation] and in contact with you, and I cannot take the risk that she will talk to both you and [the victim]."

Conrad reduced Price's bond from $50,000 to $5,000 full cash under the following conditions: Price would be placed on home incarceration with work release hours; he is to have no contact with the victim or the victim's family; he must stay out of [victim's residence];

he will pay all associated costs of his extradition from Florida and his Monitored Conditional Release (MCR) costs, and that he agrees to all MCR conditions.

Price will be back in court Oct. 9 at 9 a.m. for another pre-trial conference.

• James P. McFarland pleaded not guilty at his arraignment for charges of possession of heroin and drug paraphernalia. McFarland was already facing charges of possession of heroin and methamphetamine.

His attorney, Kenneth McCardwell, asked Judge Conrad to release McFarland on his own recognizance, arguing that failures to appear resulted from incarceration, not from McFarland's intention to not appear. He asked that McFarland be released and returned to MCR or treatment.

"I keep bouncing back and forth," McFarland told Conrad. "I keep getting locked up here and locked up there. I can't go to my court dates because they keep serving warrants on me."

Clubb argued against McFarland's release citing fear for his life.

"I'm afraid he's going to end up dead if he keeps using," Clubb said.

"I'm not going to use again," McFarland said. "I swear."

"Don't insult me," Conrad admonished McFarland, saying she heard the same promise from him several years ago when he first began appearing in her courtroom.

"I meant no offense, ma'am," McFarland said. "This is a hard disease to beat."

Conrad agreed to consider the request, but had not made a decision as of the Local's press time.

McFarland will be back in court on August 14.

Kelley Berry

Berry selected for the governor scholar program

Kelley Berry, daughter of Ed and Tish Berry and a junior at Cornerstone Christian Academy, has been selected for the Governor's Scholars Program.

The Governor's Scholars Program strives to enhance Kentucky's next generation of civic and economic leaders, according to information on the program's website.

Established in 1983, the program provides academic and personal growth through the balance of a strong liberal arts program with a full co-curricular and residential life experience.

Students must complete an application and compete with others from across the state.

Those selected attend the program free of charge.

New business is exciting in Henry County

Being the Chamber director certainly has been fun this month. Grand openings always make me happy, and we have had two in one week and another coming up on June 20 at noon.

Eminence Apothecary will celebrate June 20-21 with a ribbon cutting on the 20th, but that is just one of many activities planned for the weekend. There will be hourly giveaways (must be present to win), the Diabetes Coalition will be sharing information to interested customers, food for all, a bouncy for the children, and the grand prizes are a 50" tv as well as a Kindle (must be present to win). Drane Stephens is excited to see everyone, and I hope you will mark your calendar to attend this next grand opening.

I think most of Henry County was on hand for the ribbon cutting at the new McDonald's, and it was a very festive occasion. Residents have discussed whether McDonald's was actually coming to Eminence for years, and it is now a reality.

PAT*wallace*
Henry County Chamber of Commerce

Another ribbon cutting took place the same week in Pleasureville when the new Main Street Café' and Bakery opened its doors. Open from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. each day for lunch, the restaurant is the key to more economic development in Pleasureville. The bakery opens at 7 a.m., and I hear it sells out each day. The Chamber welcomes them as new members, and this has the smell of not only good food but of success.

There are some dates for all to place on their calendars. June 24 is our dinner at the Smith-Berry Winery with Bill Lamb from WDRB as our speaker. This dinner is sponsored by AT&T and Providence, New Castle (formerly Homestead Nursing Center.) Dinner is $20 for chamber members and $25 for non-members. Reservations are required (845-0806) by June 20. Chuck Smith will be catering the meal and Smith-Berry Winery is sponsoring the appetizers.

If you watch WDRB, you are familiar with the "Point of View" gentleman who is also the President and General Manager of Broadcast Operations for Block Communications, Inc. overseeing nine TV stations. He has written a book on leadership and culture change called Money Follows Excellence. I am looking forward to hearing him and enjoying a great dinner.

Don't forget Campbellsburg Day on June 21. Beginning with Arts and Craft vendors at 10 a.m. and continuing with many events and activities during the day such as a parade, a magician, dancers, 6 Guns Entertainment, dancers, and concluding with Tayler Lynch and Six Miles South performing from 6:30 p.m.-10:30, this will be a celebration of community. Car and motorcycle shows, corn hole tournament, animal adoption, and a big silent auction will also add to the enjoyment.

Another event coming soon is the annual Henry County Harvest Showcase. This fun day on July 26 highlights the great food, artists and craft people, farms, animals and everything Henry County. The Chamber will have their "famous" country ham breakfast with eggs laid in Henry County and hams cured in Henry County, tomatoes (we hope) from the gardens of Henry County, and cooked by Jason Scriber, friends and family. I hope you can come out from 7-10 to share this time with us. Our sponsor for this event is Historic Kentucky with author William Matthews who is the author of Editor, Actor, Ballplayer, Spy. As evidenced by the title, you can expect a varied account of an interesting life. Historic Kentucky is chartered in Henry County and I hope you will stop by the breakfast and booth where you can purchase the book.

I remember when the main thought of many people was that there is nothing to do in Henry County, but today things have changed. Check out the Kentucky Renaissance Faire just at the edge of Eminence until July 6 (weekends only), enjoy dinner and a concert at Smith-Berry Winery, hike or ride your horse at Lake Jericho and have a picnic overlooking beautiful scenery, have a fine meal at Our Best Restaurant as well as Main Street Café' and Bakery, go four-wheeling at Mud Madness near Lockport, attend the various days offered by our towns, and check out DQ and McDonald's for a summer treat.

I know my involvement in these and other activities certainly keep me busy. Have a great summer!

On Tuesday July 24 at 1 p.m., Becky Jew of the Project Linus Program will be at the Extension Office to present a demonstration on the weighted blanket project that they have become involved with.

If you would like to learn about this program and how these blankets are made and how you might help just stop by.

Lawsuit victory for Kentucky farmers

Last week, I wrote about the delay in the administration of the 2014 programs such as the CAIP cost share programs which rely on Kentucky Ag Development Funds. These funds have been available to Henry County farmers since 2001, and used to be known as the Phase I funds of the Master Settlement Agreement. The delay was caused because some of the Tobacco Settlement Funds had not been received yet by the state.

There was also the news that when we did

UK COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SERVICE

University of Kentucky – College of Agriculture

Extension Notes

Agriculture and Natural Resources

Steve Moore
Henry County Extension Office

get the county funds, they would be considerably less than in previous years. But last week, Governor Beshear and Attorney General Conway held a press conference to announce a victory for Kentucky Farmers. They announced that the state had settled 10 years of litigation, starting with 2003 payments and running through 2012. This settlement relieves the state from the financial burden of litigation, and ensures that Kentucky will continue to receive its MSA payments.

While this is good news, I don't expect to have news about exactly how it will impact Henry County until after the Kentucky Agriculture Development Board meets this Friday at the Franklin County Extension Office. Whenever we get the news, we'll let you know via this column about both the amount Henry County will have available for CAIP and when we will be ready to take farmer applications.

PASTURED POULTRY

The Third Thursday Thing at the KSU Mills Lane Farm near

Frankfort, June 19, will feature great discussions and demonstrations about raising pastured poultry. One of the presentations is title "The good, the bad, and the ugly of raising pastured poultry." They'll also be demonstrating the mobile processing unit. If you have any interest about raising poultry for your own use or to sell as meat, this Third Thursday Thing should not be missed. Contact the Henry County Extension Office at 845-2811 for details.

CATTLEMAN'S ASSOCIATION TO MEET

The Henry County Cattleman's Association will meet Monday, June 23, at 7 p.m., at the Henry County Extension Office. Dr. Gregg Rentfrow, UK Meats Specialist, will be the featured speaker, with all the usual local agency and veterinarians reports and a great beef supper. Please contact the Henry County Extension Office (845-2811) by Friday to register.

New Castle Patriotic Festival

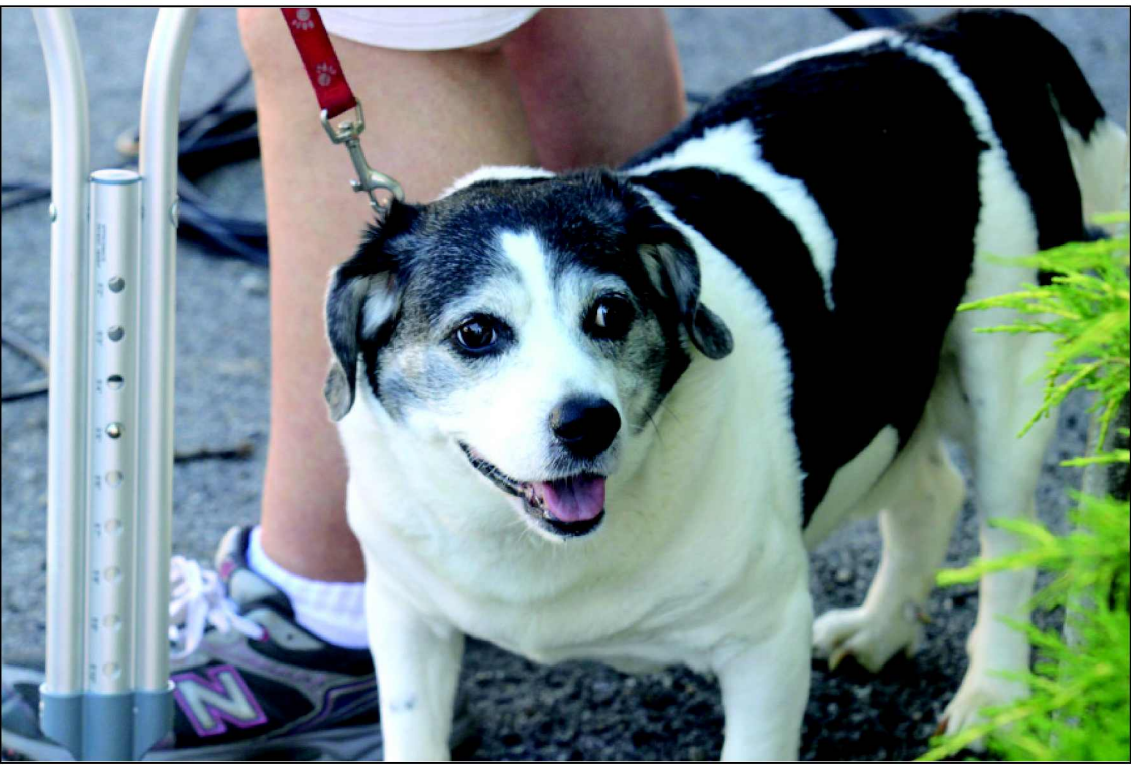

WILL PHILLIPS/ LOCAL
